**Umbilical hernias and tight/pinched nostrils are relatively common in the Shih Tzu...it is our experience that the swelling caused by teething in the brachycephalic breeds is frequently diagnosed by veterinarians as stenotic nares ...the condition is almost always outgrown by 6 months of age without veterinary intervention. Umbilical (not inguinal) hernias are of little consequence...if you are concerned about these "imperfections", please ask if the puppy you are interested in is affected...umbilical hernias can usually be detected by two to three weeks of age...tight nostrils may not be evident until 4-6 weeks when the puppy starts teething.
